

Collection Drive for Nepal

Thousands of people have been killed by a massive 7.9 magnitude earthquake that hit Nepal. There is widespread devastation across Nepal. The death toll, now above 4,000 continues to rise as search and rescue efforts are underway in Kathmandu and across the country. There have been 92 aftershocks all ranging between 4.2 to 5.6 Richter scale. People are still trapped under collapsed buildings in Kathmandu, and there is no way to accurately guess how many are in need throughout the other cities and thousands of villages at this time.

The immediate need on the ground is for medical support, search and rescue, emergency shelters and food and water among many other things. As the days, weeks and months go by and after the humanitarian needs are addressed, Nepal will need to begin the healing and rebuilding process. The magnitude of the damage is still being assessed, but hundreds of buildings have collapsed including many homes and many of Nepal's ancient and iconic temples and monuments.

CMS Business School organized a Collection Drive for Nepal on 28 April 2015 to extend a hand of support to help the people suffering from the devastating Earthquake. Students have worked tirelessly to gather crucial resources for the affected residents of Nepal witnessed participation from students, faculty and staff who came together to contribute.
